

ABSTRACT

A number of new electronic training systems and methods are disclosed. In some exemplary embodiments, an instructor can control the environment of a student presented to the student via a student computer, while maintaining real life communication between the instructor and the student via audio and/or video communication(s).